Excavations at Žuta Lokva yielded the building, dimensions 25 x 20 m, dating from 1st to beginning of the 2nd century. Dimensions of a building are 20 X 25 and it had two phases. This building was probably a caupona, diversorium or hospitium on a road that connected the port of Senia (Senj) with Roman towns Avendo (Kompolje) and Arrupium (Prozor near Otočac) in hinterland of Siscia (Sisak) in Pannonia. Pottery material showed a large number of Sarius cups, north Italian terra sigillata, thin walled pottery and African sigillata, pottery from Dalmatian workshops in Crikvenica and other table and coarse ware.
